Allen Family. 1 volume (912 pages) and 1 reel of microfilm. (Misc. reel 5329)

Account book, 1721–1754, of the Allen family of Surry County, Virginia, chiefly containing mercantile and personal accounts of John Allen (ca. 1684–1741 or 2). The accounts begin in 1721 and are carried on, irregularly, by an unspecified successor after Allen's death. In addition to Surry County, there are references to residents of and holdings in other localities, including Williamsburg. The book is a resource on topics including the tobacco business; slavery and indentured servitude; plantation life; the settlement of debts by barter of goods and labor as well as cash; and how overseers were paid, both with cash and in shares of crops. In addition there are references to the construction of various buildings, frequently mills or tobacco barns, giving dimensions and outlining how the properties were to be finished, and to repairs, including chimney work, making windows, and replastering. As well as highlighting the daily activities and business of the community, the book contains information of use to family historians. Familial connections are noted both in the accounts and in the identification of debtors, including mention of marriages of individuals with whom Allen had dealings. Also of interest are identifications of tobacco marks used by various growers, and notations about patents, the reissuing of patents in other names, surveys, and sales of rights. Purchased. (43393)

Essay, 1897, entitled "Thoughts on Lynching," written by an author identified only as Ludwell. He asserts that "a government of the People, by the People and for the People...in its ultimate analysis means any order, or disorder that the People wish." The author also asserts that the 14th and 15th amendments to the Constitution justify the practice of lynching by giving individuals the power to take justice into their own hands. The author calls for the repeal of these amendments in order to end the practice of lynching. Forms part of the Robert Alonzo Brock Collection. (41008)
